- Collaborating with the VP of Graduate and Professional Studies, the Office of Admissions, and the Marketing department to support recruitment of new students
- Assuming primary responsibility for pursuing and maintaining APA accreditation, including writing the program self-study and arranging the APA site visits
- Teaching a broad range of graduate courses within the field of Clinical Psychology
- Supervising graduate students in the development and completion of independent research projects
- Evaluating student clinical competencies
- Identifying and resolving graduate student issues
- Serving the University through committee participation and other assigned tasks

Qualifications for the successful candidate:

- Evangelical Christian confession of faith and experience is required; Church of the Nazarene membership preferred
- Doctoral degree in Clinical Psychology
- Licensure as a Psychologist
- Evidence of effective graduate-level instruction and research supervision
- Demonstrated skills in management of academic programming preferred
- Excellent oral and written communication skills
- Commitment to inclusivity and diversity
- Proven ability to work collaboratively with others

In a continuing effort to enrich its academic environment and provide equal educational and employment opportunities, the university actively encourages applications from members of all ethnic groups underrepresented in higher education. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled; however, early application is strongly advised. Interested candidates should send an application letter, curriculum vita, unofficial college transcripts, evidence of teaching competence, names and contact information for three references, a one- to two- page statement of educational philosophy, and a one- to two-page statement of faith. Applicants are encouraged to submit application materials via email as Microsoft Word, .pdf file attachments, or as hard copies to:
